PREFACE

Four editions of the Alumni Record of Wesleyan University have been published to date. The first (1869) was compiled and published at his own expense by Orange Judd, '47; the second (1873) was published by the Alumni Association; the third (1883) and the fourth (1911) were issued by the University. This fifth edition was authorized by the Trustees in May, 1919, but publication has been delayed by the high cost of printing. The present intention is to issue a sixth edition in 1931, when the college celebrates its one hundredth anniversary.

The plan of this book follows that of 1911, but with certain curtailments, due to limitation of space, and with some additional matter. With the large graduating classes of recent years, the number of individual records to be treated has risen to over 6,500; an account of each, as complete as in the previous edition, would have made a book too cumbersome for convenient use. Therefore the records of those who died before 1911 are given in this edition in condensed form, though all essential facts are stated; and, in order to save further space, the appointments of Methodist Episcopal ministers are not given year by year, but only their Conference relations.

In accord with the practice of a number of colleges and universities which have adopted this method, among others, of emphasizing the importance of high scholarship, a new feature in this edition is the mention of honors achieved at graduation. Up to the year 1873 the highest scholar of a graduating class at Weslevan was termed the Valedictorian. the second in rank, the Salutatorian; the abbreviations Valedic, and Salut, after the bachelor's degree in this book indicate these respective honors. Beginning in 1874, honors in general scholarship were awarded in two grades, first and second, and special honors were granted in the several departments of study. Since 1897, honors in general scholarship have been distinguished as honors and high honors, and honors in the several departments of study are also divided into two groups, similarly named. With this explanation, the italic abbreviations after the bachelor's degree in the book will, it is hoped, be intelligible. The following further explanatory remarks may be offered concerning certain other features:

Abbreviations. Only those in common use have been employed, as, for instance, b. for born, m. for married, d. for died. An asterisk before a name indicates decease.

Degrees. All degrees are from Wesleyan University, unless otherwise stated, except that in a few cases, for lack of information, M.D. is printed without indication of the college from which it was received.

WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY ALUMNI RECORD.

Bibliography. On account of lack of space it has been impossible to include mention of articles and ephemeral publications; the titles of books only are given, and in many cases merely a selection of titles from a long list.

Fraternities. Mention of fraternities is restricted to those in active existence at the present time, including the Commons Club. These are, in the order of their establishment: Phi Nu Theta (Eclectic), Psi Upsilon, Chi Psi, Alpha Delta Phi, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Beta Theta Pi, Commons Club, Delta Tau Delta, Alpha Chi Rho, Delta Upsilon, Sigma Nu, and Gamma Psi.

The committee of the Trustees charged with the publication of the Fifth Edition of the Record consists of Dr. David G. Downey, '84, Mr. Henry I. Harriman, '95, and Dr. Frank K. Hallock, '82, to each of whom the Editor is greatly indebted for advice and assistance.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY

It was not until about the close of the first quarter of the last century that the Methodist Episcopal Church began to give any very earnest and hearty patronage to the cause of higher education. Between the years 1824 and 1826, the flourishing seminaries at Wilbraham, Kents Hill, and Cazenovia were opened under the auspices of the denomination, and immediately secured a large attendance. While the seminaries served to foster and encourage the newly-awakened interest in education, the leading minds of the Church became convinced of the need of some institution of collegiate rank, located in New England or New York, which should provide facilities for the highest intellectual culture.

At this juncture, a seeming accident turned their attention to Middletown, Conn., and secured the immediate establishment of the projected institution at this place. In 1825, Capt. Alden Partridge, first Superintendent of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, opened in Middletown the "American Literary, Scientific, and Military Academy." Through the liberality of the citizens of Middletown, two substantial stone buildings had been erected for the school; and it was for a short time very prosperous, drawing cadets from almost every state in the Union. Its prosperity, however, soon waned; and, because of failure to obtain a charter from the Legislature, it was removed, early in 1829, to Norwich, Vt., leaving vacant the buildings it had occupied. The Rev. Laban Clark, D.D., then Presiding Elder of the New Haven District, happened shortly after to be in Middletown; and being informed that one of the trustees of these buildings had casually suggested selling them to the Methodists, for the sum of five thousand dollars, he at once notified them that he would be one of ten to purchase the property, and would promptly secure the other nine. This led to the serious consideration of the matter; and at the ensuing session of the New York Conference, May, 1829, Dr. Clark presented from the trustees proposals for the transfer of the property in due form, and urged their acceptance upon the conference. A committee, consisting of James Emory, Samuel Lucky, and Heman Bangs, was appointed to consider these proposals. The New England Conference, being invited to unite in the project. appointed Timothy Merritt, S. Martindale, and Willbur Fisk to act in conjunction with the New York Committee.

The first act of this joint committee was to issue proposals inviting the several towns within a specified region to compete for the location of the college by the offer of subscriptions. Liberal offers came from Troy, N. Y., Bridgeport, Conn., and Wilbraham, Mass.; but those from Middletown were now so modified that the committee had no hesitation in preferring them. The trustees of the Academy, with the consent of the stockholders, offered the entire property, valued at about $30,000, to the conferences, on the two conditions, that it should be perpetually used for a college or university, and that a fund of $40,000 should first be raised for the endowment of the college. About $18,000 of this fund was promptly subscribed by citizens of Middletown. The report of the committee recommending the acceptance of this offer was adopted at the session of conference in May, 1830. The $40,000 was soon raised, trustees were at once chosen, and the college organized under the name, "The Wesleyan University."

At the first meeting of the joint Board of Trustees and Visitors, August 24, 1830, the Rev. Willbur Fisk, D.D., then principal of Wesleyan Academy, was elected first President of the Wesleyan University. In October of the same year, a preparatory school was opened in the buildings, under the superintendence of the Rev. W. C. Larrabee. In May, 1831, a charter was granted the University which provided that the institution should be non-sectarian in character; and on the twenty-first of the following September its halls were opened to students. The Faculty consisted of President Fisk, Professors Augustus W. Smith and John Mott Smith, and Tutor W. Magoun. At first, in accordance with the peculiar views of President Fisk, which were afterwards entertained by Presidents Wayland of Brown and Marsh of the University of Vermont, the proficiency of the student was made the only basis of classification; and any student able to pass the requisite examination received a diploma, without regard to the time he had spent in college. This plan, however, was soon abandoned, and the usual system of classification adopted in its stead. It is worthy of note, that the Wesleyan University anticipated another of the most important features of the new education, by establishing, very early in its history, a scientific course, to meet the wants of those who wished to obtain advanced literary and scientific training, but whose tastes or circumstances forbade the ordinary classical course. In its early days of poverty and of struggle, the institution had many faithful and earnest friends, among whom Dr. Laban Clark and Dr. Heman Bangs are worthy of especial mention; but to no one was it so deeply indebted as to its President, Willbur Fisk. His pure and lofty piety and his gentle and winning manner endeared him to all who knew him; while his tact and prudence, his high administrative ability, his thorough culture and extensive reputation, and his untiring efforts in behalf of the University, soon assured its success, and secured for it general recognition.

At the death of Dr. Fisk, in 1839, Dr. Stephen Olin, then in Europe, was elected President. On his return from Europe, the following year, Dr. Olin found himself too feeble to assume the duties of the presidency, and consequently resigned it early in 1841. In February of that year, Dr. Nathan Bangs was elected to the vacant post. Dr. Bangs, then in the midst of a long and honorable career, felt that the sphere of his greatest usefulness lay elsewhere; he accepted the position with reluctance, and in July, 1842, willingly resigned it to Dr. Olin, whose health had now so improved as to justify his acceptance.

Dr. Olin's fame as a pulpit orator, and his previous success in a similar situation, caused him to be greeted with an enthusiastic welcome. His health was so feeble as never to allow him to devote himself as he wished to the work of instruction. He was, however, very successful in improving the financial condition of the University, and extending its reputation; and his noble and commanding character was itself an inspiration to all the students under his charge. He received very efficient aid in the general administration of the University from Professor Augustus W. Smith, LL.D., who for several years filled the office of Vice-President.

Dr. Olin died in 1851. After an interval of a year, Professor Smith was elected to the chair of President. Dr. Smith had been connected with the University from the beginning; he was a most thorough scholar, and extended, while President, the high and well-deserved reputation he had won as a professor of mathematics. It was the constant desire of President Smith, during the whole term of his administration, to secure such an endowment fund for the University as would relieve it from the constant pressure of financial embarrassment, and assure its continued existence and prosperity. About $100,000 was subscribed to this fund; and although, as is usual in such cases, the full amount subscribed was never realized, yet by the persevering labors of President Smith, ably aided by Professor H. B. Lane, more than $80,000 was at this time invested for the endowment of professorships. Mr. Isaac Rich, of Boston, was the chief donor to this fund.

Upon the resignation of President Smith, in 1857, the Rev. Joseph Cummings, D.D., LL.D., President of Genesee College (B.A., Wesleyan, 1840), was elected to the vacant post, although he did not assume office until the spring of 1858. The personal force and energy of President Cummings, his tireless industry, his hearty devotion to the welfare of the University, together with his skill and popularity as an instructor, combined to make his administration in many respects a very successful one. It was particularly marked by the growth of the material interests of the institution, in which President Cummings always took especial concern. To his labors the University is principally indebted for the line of noble buildings that now crown the hill.

During the Commencement week of 1868, a new and tasteful, library building, capable of containing ninety thousand volumes, was dedicated. This building was erected by the late Mr. Isaac Rich, at a cost of $40,000. During the same week, the contributions of Mr. Rich to the Endowment Fund were increased to $100,000. In the fall of 1868, the old "Boarding Hall" was remodeled and transformed into "Observatory Hall," by the addition of a tower, in which was placed one of Alvan Clark's finest refracting telescopes. The Commencement season of 1871 was rendered memorable by the dedication of two new and beautiful buildings. The one, the Memorial Chapel, was erected at a cost of about $60,000, in memory of those alumni and students who fell in the war for the Union. The funds for the erection of this chapel were mostly raised by general subscription during the centenary year, 1866. The other building was the Orange Judd Hall of Natural Science, erected during the years 1869-71, at a cost of $100,000. For this building the University is indebted to the munificence of Orange Judd (B.A., Wesleyan, 1847), of New York, N. Y., who will ever be remembered as one of the most faithful and generous friends of his Alma Mater.

It was during this period also that provision was made for the regular increase of the library and the scientific collections of the University. During the years 1864-65, a library fund amounting to $27,600 was raised by the alumni. This fund, although originally none too large, and afterwards somewhat depleted by unfortunate investments, secured for the library a continuous, if not a very rapid, growth. The completion of the Orange Judd Hall of Natural Science, in 1872, provided ample accommodations for the proper care and arrangement of the scientific collections of the University; and in the years immediately following, large additions were made to these collections, chiefly by the endeavors of Mr. G. Brown Goode (B.A., Wesleyan, 1870), then Curator of the Museum. Since that time the growth of the Museum has been constant and rapid. In 1872 the college curriculum was enlarged, especially in the department of natural science, and modified by the extension of the elective system; and in the fall of that year the halls of the University were, for the first time, opened to women.

President Cummings resigned his position in June, 1875, though he continued in charge of the department of philosophy until January, 1878. At a special meeting, held July 28, 1875, the Trustees elected as the successor of President Cummings, the Rev. Cyrus D. Foss, D.D. (B.A., Wesleyan, 1854). President Foss entered upon the duties of his office at the opening of the fall term, and was formally inaugurated October 26, 1875. He found it necessary to give immediate attention to the enlargement of the permanent funds of the University. The growth of the endowment during the previous ten years had by no means kept pace with the growth of the unproductive wealth of the University in buildings, collections, and other material facilities. The increase in the number of buildings and the needful enlargements of the course of study rendered the annual expenditures, of necessity, greater than ever; while, on the other hand, in the stagnation of business and general financial depression that followed the panic of 1873, the productive property of the University had depreciated greatly in value. In March, 1876, a committee of the Trustees decided that only about one-half of the bills receivable reported at the previous Commencement could be any longer considered good. A debt, allowed gradually to increase for twenty years, had reached the sum of $60,000; while the total amount of funds from which income was available was only $141,000. The annual expenditure was about $46,000; the annual income from all sources only $20,000. In these circumstances, it was evident—to quote the words of President Foss in his report to the conference in 1876—that "only large and generous help, promptly given to the institution, could save it from disaster." Never, perhaps, was the University in a more critical position. It is gratifying to be able to record that the generosity of its friends soon removed it out of urgent danger. A committee appointed by the Alumni Association appealed for aid to all the graduates of the college. In response to this appeal about $40,000 was subscribed, of which the greater part was paid. Still more largely liberal was the response to the untiring energy of President Foss. The inevitable annual deficit, while it yet continued, was met by generous annual subscriptions, in advance, chiefly from the Trustees. The debt of the University was paid. Largely by his efforts, the "Centennial Fund," started in 1876, was carried to about $400,000, some of which was not paid in until after his retirement from the presidency. During the five years of his administration, nearly $250,000 was added to the permanent productive funds. If the needs of the University were still great, the danger of immediate disaster was past. Of the group of generous friends whose liberality brought this timely aid, the largest giver was Hon. George I. Seney (non-graduate, class of 1845), who began then the series of his princely gifts.

But it was not financial success alone that marked the administration of President Foss. A character so noble, a kindness and courtesy so unvarying, an enthusiasm for goodness so inspiring, a piety so high and pure—these could not fail of their effect upon all who knew him. His influence was itself an education of the best sort. No president of Wesleyan University was ever more respected; none was ever better beloved.

In May of 1880, President Foss was called by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church to fill the highest office in the gift of the Church. At the annual meeting of the Trustees in June following, the place thus made vacant was filled by the election of the Rev. John W. Beach, D.D. (B.A., Wesleyan, 1845). President Beach brought to his position a sound, conservative scholarship, combined with energy and caution in the management of practical affairs and a remarkable mastery of administrative details. The opening years of his administration promised a large increase in the resources of the University, but adverse circumstances prevented the complete fulfillment of that promise. A period of general financial stringency came on. There was a shrinkage in rates of interest, and Mr. Seney, the most liberal benefactor of the University thus far, who had already given over $175,000, found it impossible to pay the large additional sum which he had promised in the first year of President Beach's administration. For some years, therefore, the University grew but slowly, yet it continued to grow. No additional debts were incurred, the number of the Faculty was not lessened, while the number of students steadily, though slowly, increased.

President Beach retired from office in 1887, and Senior Professor John M. Van Vleck (B.A., Wesleyan, 1850), to whose wise counsels Wesleyan University had owed so much ever since its early days, served as Acting-President for two years. In November, 1888, the Rev. Bradford Paul Raymond, Ph.D., D.D., LL.D., was elected President, but did not assume the duties of his office until the beginning of the next college year, in September, 1889. At the time of his election, President Raymond was at the head of Lawrence University, in Appleton, Wis. He had enjoyed a thorough educational training, and brought to his new office enthusiasm, vigor, and liberal notions of educational policy. He held the chair of President until 1908, a longer period than that of any preceding President.

Those nineteen years were marked by great advancement in almost every department of the college life. In December, 1889, Dr. Daniel Avres (non-graduate, class of 1842) gave to the University securities to the value of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, "for scientific purposes." In the next year, 1890, by the will of D. B. Fayerweather, Wesleyan received a bequest of one hundred thousand dollars and a share in the residue of the estate. There was considerable litigation attending the settlement of the estate, but the University has received in all from that source the sum of nearly $224,000. Twenty-five thousand dollars of the Fayerweather bequest was added to an amount already raised by subscription for a new college gymnasium; and this building, the Fayerweather Gymnasium, was formally dedicated in October, 1895. With this exception, the full amount of these two large bequests was devoted to the increase of the permanent Endowment Fund. Other gifts from time to time increased this permanent Endowment Fund before the close of the term of President Raymond to the sum of $1,506,909.

The real property of the University also largely increased during President Raymond's term. In the summer of 1893 the interior of old North College was entirely renovated by Mr. John E. Andrus (B.A., Wesleyan, 1862) at an expense of about $26,500. In 1903-04 a new physical laboratory was erected by the liberality of Mr. Charles Scott and Mr. Charles Scott, Jr. (B.A., Wesleyan, 1886), of Philadelphia, to be called the John Bell Scott Laboratory of Physics, in memory of John Bell Scott of the class of 1881, who died while serving as naval chaplain during the Spanish war of 1898. This well-appointed building cost about $117,000. During the same years the Willbur Fisk Hall on High Street was erected at a cost of about $118,000, and was paid for mostly by individual gifts in the "Twentieth Century Thank Offering Movement."

On the morning of March 1, 1906, the old North College burned to the ground. The new structure, which took its place and occupies the same site, was opened in January, 1908. It cost about $134,000.

The Alumni Library Fund, which had originally amounted to $27,600, had been reduced by unfortunate investments to about $18,000, a sum altogether inadequate to the needs of the library. In the Commencement season of 1895, a movement was started to increase this fund by a general subscription among the alumni, and Mr. John E. Andrus, '62, generously offered to give one dollar for every three that should be thus contributed. The sum raised in this way amounted to $16,857. Then, in the fall of 1898, the library received the sum of $30,000 and a choice collection of 6,000 volumes by the will of the Rev. Albert S. Hunt, D.D. (B.A., Wesleyan, 1851). Three years later the Library Fund received a further addition of $20,000 from a bequest of Mrs. Stephen Wilcox, of Brooklyn, N. Y. The Library Fund was thus increased to more than $89,000.

The total property of the University increased in these ways amounted, at the close of the administration of President Raymond, to $2,589,923, having more than doubled since he took office.

The question of co-education was a matter of earnest discussion during the whole term of President Raymond. So long as there were comparatively few women in college their presence excited little opposition, but after 1800 their number rapidly increased. In March, 1800, the Trustees authorized the appointment of a joint committee of Trustees, Faculty, and alumni to consider the whole question of co-education in Weslevan University. The deliberations of this committee lasted somewhat over a year, and they were not able then to agree upon a unanimous report. But as the result of their deliberations, in June of 1900 the Trustees voted that the number of women to be admitted to the college in future should be limited to twenty per cent. of the total number of students in the preceding year. This action, however, like all measures of compromise, was not really satisfactory to anybody, and the opposition to co-education, although less bitter and pronounced, continued, until finally, in February, 1909, the Trustees voted that no women should be admitted to any class later than that entering in 1909. In point of fact, no women presented themselves for admission after the passage of that vote, and with the graduation of the class of 1012 the presence of women undergraduates ceased. The Trustees in a later resolution made it clear that women may be admitted as graduate students, and a few have availed themselves of the privilege.

The large addition to the resources of the University during President Raymond's administration allowed an expansion of the course of study and an increase in the number of the Faculty. When he took office the Faculty numbered twenty. When he resigned it numbered thirty-seven. There was also a corresponding increase in the number of students enrolled. Appropriations were made by the State and the National Government for the prosecution of scientific research in the laboratories of the University, and it was in this period that the important investigations of Professors Atwater, Rosa, Benedict, and Conn did much to extend the reputation of the University.

But large as was the increase in the resources of the University, its expenditures more than kept pace with its income, until during the last few years of President Raymond's term there was a considerable annual deficit. The cares and responsibilities of his office, increasing with the growth of the University, told heavily upon the health of President Raymond, and he was obliged in the summer of 1907 to tender his resignation, to take effect in 1908. He accepted the position of Professor of the English Bible, but his continued ill health rendered it impossible for him to perform the duties of that office, and, in 1909, he was retired as Professor Emeritus. He continued until his death in 1916 to reside in Middletown, where his genial, sympathetic nature had won for him the lasting respect and love of a host of friends. Through the major part of his administration President Raymond was ably assisted in the conduct of the internal affairs of the University by Professor John M. Van Vleck, who held the office of Vice-President from 1890 to 1903, and for a third time served as Acting-President during Dr. Raymond's absence on leave in 1896-97.

On the resignation of President Raymond, Professor William North Rice, '65, who, since the retirement of Professor Van Vleck, had been the senior professor in active service, was made Acting-President, and he filled that office for an interregnum of two years. On November 13. 1008, the Trustees elected to the presidency William Arnold Shanklin. D.D., LL.D., then President of Upper Iowa University. President Shanklin assumed the duties of his office immediately after Commencement, 1909, and was formally inaugurated on November 12, 1909. devoted his first year to familiarizing himself with the details of administration and forming acquaintance with the student body, and with the patrons and friends of the University. The next year, 1910-11, he engaged in an effort to secure an addition of $1,000,000 to the resources of the University. From the outset his remarkable energy and the charm of his personality evoked most general and hearty enthusiasm, stimulated everywhere the interest and loyalty of the alumni and friends of the University, and thus assured the success of his administration.

One of the first tasks which President Shanklin set for himself was the improvement of the financial condition of the University. As a result of the vigorous campaign of 1910 and 1911, he was able to announce in June, 1912, that subscriptions were in hand amounting to $1,043,828. Practically every subscription was ultimately paid in full. This very considerable addition to the endowment funds made possible the payment of a deficit of $90,000 which had accumulated in recent years, the enlargement of the Faculty, an increase in salaries, and the setting aside of a small surplus to meet future needs.

A programme of conservative but steady advancement in educational policy was inaugurated at the first Faculty meeting over which President Shanklin presided, by the appointment of a special committee on the improvement of scholarship. Within the next few years the requirements for promotion and graduation were raised to a higher standard by the adoption of a number of recommendations from this committee.

The normal development of the University was interrupted by the conditions which grew out of the Great War. Shortly after its outbreak much interest in military matters began to be manifested. In 1915 several alumni and students attended the summer training camp in Plattsburg, N. Y. In 1016 a still larger number were in attendance. A Reserve Officers' Training Corps was authorized in 1916, and established shortly before the declaration of war in April, 1917. The Faculty had already voted to put the facilities and equipment of the University at the disposal of the National Government, and to adjust generously the credits for uncompleted courses in the case of students entering the national service. The response of both alumni and students to the call of the nation was prompt and general. In the spring of 1018 a broad scheme was adopted for the fuller adaptation of the curriculum to the requirements of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, and this scheme was readily adjusted to the plan prepared in the ensuing summer by the War Department for the establishment of the Student Army Training Corps. President Shanklin had a part in the preparation of this plan as a member of the Committee of Seven representing the Emergency Council on Education, comprising all the institutions of higher education in the country.

In October, 1918, the entire undergraduate body, with the exception of a few students exempted from military duty, was inducted with impressive ceremony into the service of the Government, and Major Philip G. Wrightson, U. S. A., assumed command. The difficulties of the trying period that followed were very much mitigated by the helpful spirit of cooperation shown by the Commandant, his staff, and the Faculty. Several members of the Faculty were engaged in important research work for the Government: Dean Nicolson became Assistant District Supervisor of the New England District of the Student Army Training Corps, and practically every member of the instructing staff was assigned unfamiliar duties. The University became for the time being a military post; but in few institutions did the anomalous arrangement work as smoothly and as successfully as at Wesleyan. November came the armistice: the undergraduates were mustered out of service, and the administration of the University returned to an academic basis. At the Victory Commencement in June, 1919, Wesleyan fittingly commemorated the devotion of her sons, especially of the twenty-seven who gave their lives in the cause of freedom and justice.

Immediately after the armistice, liberal arrangements were announced by means of which students who had left college to enter the national service were enabled to complete their work for graduation, an opportunity of which a gratifyingly large number availed themselves. This seemed to the Faculty also an appropriate time for a thorough revision of the curriculum, of scholarship regulations, and of requirements for admission, and a Committee on Academic Policy was therefore constituted to study these problems. Though no radical changes were introduced, the adoption of numerous amendments suggested by the experience of recent years and the systematic correlation of all provisions relating to instruction and scholarship resulted in marked improvement in the desired directions.

In view of the gradual advancement in standards, the increase in the size of the student body from less than three hundred men in 1909 to more than five hundred in 1915 was especially gratifying. With the attainment of an enrollment of five hundred, the much discussed question of the limitation of numbers had to be faced frankly, and in 1920, pursuant to recommendations of the Faculty, the Trustees authorized the limitation of the undergraduate body to an average attendance of about five hundred.

The increased importance accorded in recent years to physical education, which received added emphasis from the experiences of the war, was recognized by the election in 1913 of Edgar Fauver, M.D., as Professor in charge of the department; by the extension in 1919 of the required work in physical training to cover the whole of the first three years of the college course, with the instruction on the same basis as in other departments; by the development of a complete system of intramural athletics; by the addition in 1915 of swimming to the number of intercollegiate sports; and by constituting the Professor of Physical Education college physician, with full supervision over the health of the college community.

Increased attention was also given to the development of the religious training and spiritual life of the students by the appointment of a salaried graduate secretary of the Christian Association, by the maintenance, beginning with the year 1909, of Sunday services in the Memorial Chapel addressed by distinguished preachers, and by the organization in 1916 of the Church of Christ in Wesleyan University, membership in which is supplemental to the student's membership in his home church. The student body not only supports its Christian Association, but also contributes regularly to the work of the West China University at Cheng-tu, the President of which, as well as several members of the Faculty, are graduates of Wesleyan University.

In order to meet the exigencies caused by the war-time rise in prices, and to make possible the enlargement of the Faculty, President Shanklin began in the autumn of 1919 a campaign for the raising of three million dollars of additional endowment. By Commencement, 1921, $1,200,000 had been subscribed to meet a conditional gift of $400,000 from the General Education Board. The exhibition of loyalty on the part of the alumni was even more notable than in 1911, both in their organized cooperation and in the percentage of subscribers. A gift of $75,000 from the Carnegie Corporation and a bequest of $20,000 from Mr. William H. Burrows, a member of the Board of Trustees, were added to the endowment of the library, which was thus increased to $215,000. In addition to these sums, the University received the largest single benefaction in its history, a bequest from Mr. William F. Armstrong, of New York City, amounting to about a million dollars. In anticipation of the completion of this fund, the Trustees authorized in 1919 and 1920 an increase of about fifty per cent. in Faculty salaries and the addition of several members to the instructing staff. Aside from the amounts raised by the general campaigns of 1910-12 and 1919-21, the most notable addition to the permanent funds was the gift in 1911 by Miss Elizabeth J. Mead, of Stamford, Connecticut, of $67,250 for the endowment of a chair of Ethics and Religion.

In 1911 the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching placed Wesleyan upon its list of approved colleges whose professors should be entitled to receive the retiring allowances provided by that corporation. This action may properly be considered as equivalent to a material increase in the endowment funds, or as an increase in Faculty salaries. In consequence of a change in the regulations of the Carnegie Foundation and the establishment of the Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association, the Trustees in 1921 entered into an agreement with the latter corporation on behalf of the Faculty.

During the administration of President Shanklin there have been notable improvements in buildings, grounds, and equipment. In 1914 the generosity of Mr. Charles Gibson, a Trustee, made possible the extension of Fayerweather Gymnasium to contain a swimming pool, at a total cost of over $40,000. In the following year various gifts, including one anonymous subscription of $75,000, provided for the erection of the New Dormitory at a cost of about $150,000, and the generosity of Mr. Joseph Van Vleck, together with a bequest from his brother, Professor John M. Van Vleck, '50, made possible the erection and partial equipment of the Van Vleck Observatory. In the same year a gift of $35,000 by Mr. Ralph H. Ensign and his son Mr. Joseph Ensign, with other subscriptions to a total amount of $55,000, permitted a most successful remodeling of the Memorial Chapel, and an excellent organ was installed through the liberality of Mr. John Gribbel, Vice-President of the Board of Trustees. Announcement has been made, also, of the gift by Mrs. Gardner Hall, Jr., of $150,000 for the construction of a chemical laboratory in memory of her late husband.

In the meantime the library collection has grown from 80,000 volumes, in 1909, to 127,000, in 1921, and there has been a corresponding enlargement of the laboratory equipment in the departments of psychology, biology, chemistry, and physics. The development of the equipment of the Van Vleck Observatory includes the installation of a new twenty-inch lens for the telescope, one of the ten largest lenses in this country.

The steady growth of the University in property and in the numbers of its Faculty and students, together with the extension of its several fields of activity, has increased very greatly the complexity of its administrative problems. This difficulty has necessitated important changes in the organization of the committees of both Trustees and Faculty. In 1911 an Advisory Committee of the Academic Council was created to coöperate with the President in dealing with questions of appointments to the Faculty; and in order to promote coöperation between the Trustees and the Faculty, the Committee of the Board on Faculty and Curriculum has since 1918 conferred regularly with this Advisory Committee. Upon the retirement in 1918 of Professor Rice, who as senior professor had hitherto assisted President Shanklin in the internal administration of the University and had served as Acting-President from December, 1917, to June, 1918, during the absence of the President in Europe on duties in connection with the Great War, it was decided to revive the office of Vice-President, to which the first appointee was Professor George M. Dutcher, and to create the office of Dean, which was filled by the selection of Professor Frank W. Nicolson, who had served as Secretary of the Faculty for more than a quarter of a century. In the office of Assistant Treasurer, as well as of Librarian, Dr. William J. James, '83, has rendered efficient service for many years. Professor Leroy A. Howland, '00, is now Vice-President.

An important change in the organization of the growing body of alumni was effected in 1912 through the supersession of the venerable Alumni Association by an Alumni Council with a salaried secretary. The result has been the formation of additional local alumni associations in every part of the country where a sufficient group of alumni can be found, and the helpful interest and cooperation of Wesleyan graduates in all plans for the advancement of the University. The first three secretaries, who have had the responsibility of organizing and developing the work, have been Warren F. Sheldon, '99, Roy B. Chamberlin, '09, and Arthur B. Haley, '07. Since 1916, the Council has published the Wesleyan Alumnus as its organ.

At the close of the first ninety years of its history, Wesleyan may survey with pride the steady enlargement of its resources and its consistent adherence to high intellectual and moral standards. These standards found their justification in the careers of Wesleyan alumni, whose unfaltering loyalty and generous support have contributed so largely to the success of their Alma Mater. It involves no diminution of the achievement of the earlier generations to pronounce the last dozen years, under the inspiring and tircless leadership of William Arnold Shanklin, the greatest period in the development of Wesleyan University, for it is by the loyal and indefatigable advancement of the ideals with which they so nobly endowed the institution that he has brought their work to a full and splendid fruition.

THE ANNALS OF WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY, 1910-1921

[For the Annals from the founding of the University (1831) to 1882, see The Alumni Record, 3rd edition (1881-83); from 1882 to 1910, 4th edition (1911).]
